Dear José,

The Canada Council has kindly given me some money so that I can visit Spanish libraries for a short while next month. I am thinking of going to Madrid, Salamanca and Seville, and I wondered whether there was any good advice that you could give me. Are people likely to speak ~~French~~ French or English? If not, I suppose I shall have to try Latin!

The Canadian term has already ended. I had a very busy year, teaching, and writing memos, and I don't seem to have thought about sixteenth century logic since last August. My book on logic from the fifteenth to the seventeenth centuries may be coming out in the Synthèse series on the history of logic: Kretzmann seems to be in favour, but de Rijk, who is also an editor, is annoyed because I didn't mention his work frequently enough. I have to do some rewriting and checking of sources this summer.

I suppose that you are very busy yourself these days -- I hope you are enjoying being chairman (is that even possible?) and that you still have time for movies ....

best wishes,

Jenny
