Dear Professor Ferrater Mora,

I was very sorry to hear from Paris that you were ill.
I do hope that you have fully recovered.

I just received your contribution to Contemporary Philosophy from the Secretariate. I greatly appreciate it that you were willing to complete it during the period of your convalescence.

I read your survey with great interest. May I send you my observations?

The English title of the survey was to be "Metaphysics".
I am very sorry that you should have been misled by the Secretariate in Paris. "Théorie de la Philosophie" has, as you observe, no counterpart in English. I am sure therefore, that you will agree to the deletion of the words, "and Theory of Philosophy" in the title, and, consequently, also of the remarks in the text which arise from them. This will be much more satisfactory, from your own point of view.

There are a few points of English style which, as our reader found independently of me, call for corrections. Some of the passages are noted, with suggestions by the reader. For example, "Fits within the tendency", on page 5, is meant to convey (a) that this tendency already exists, and (b) that this approach exhibits it. But, alas!, it is not good English literary style.

By separate mail I am sending you the typescript with our suggestions. If you would kindly send it back to me after you have looked at it, I will post it immediately to the printers.

With kind regards,

Yours sincerely,

Raymond Klibansky.

Raymond Klibansky.
