Dear Dr. Mora:

This is a very informative, an intelligent and publishable paper. As it is now, though, it does not make a unity. I see it as three papers in one--- a paper for our Notes and Observations sections, orienting the student in Suarezian studies, a paper throwing light on modern philosophy from the vantage point of some previous philosophy, and a paper on essence and existence. I would be delighted to have any one of them, and particularly the last. This means cutting out a part, rewriting it, perhaps expanding it, and in any case making it a single substantial whole. Will you do this for us? If you would like the present to be published as a unit, it might be acceptable to Thought or the New Scholasticism.

My greetings to Miss Stearns.

Cordially,

James
