Dear Jose:

The Journal of The History of Philosophy, like many other learned journals, is experiencing severe financial difficulties because of the ever-rising costs of printing and paper.

I am writing to you in the hope that you will be willing to help us in our present severe financial straits. We have been forced as other journals have been to raise our rates over and over again. We do not want to have to reduce the size of the Journal or its scholarly format in order to make economies. Taking such steps would, we believe, severely reduce our service to the scholarly world.

Therefore, in order to maintain our journal at its present size, format, and level, we are asking interested persons if they would be willing to donate $25.00 a year to help us defray our rapidly rising expenses. In our January 1975 issue, we have listed the people who gave us such generous support last year. It was extremely helpful in maintaining the Journal at its present level and size. If you feel that you could help us, please make your contribution to the Journal of The History of Philosophy (which is a tax-exempt organization) and send it to me at the above address.

Thank you in advance for whatever assistance you may be willing to give us.

Yours very truly

Dick
