Dear Mr. Ferrater Mora:

I would like very much to be a candidate for the Fels scholarship. How early would it be necessary to have finished the prelims? If I met the Bryn Mawr deadline of May 1, would that be all right? I ought to be able to manage that. It might even be possible to reduce the course load for next term. I haven't asked, but I will talk to the chairman of the department this week. But whether that works out or not, I can do the minimum here in order to prepare for prelims. Peirce says the medievals thought you were supposed to alternate reading and praying--maybe I could try that.

I am thinking of coming to Bryn Mawr either on Saturday of this week or else early next week, just for a day or two. If I do come, I shall call you, and perhaps we can decide what the four exams will be and set the dates. Or if that is inconvenient for you, perhaps we can see each other here in New Haven sometime during the meetings, if you are planning to come.

I hope you have a pleasant vacation. And thank you very much for your letter.

Sincerely,

Madolene Stone
