

Dear Joe,

I was delighted to read in the Alumnae Bulletin that you had received the Ludbrook Foundation Award for distinguished teaching. I never attended any lectures with greater interest than yours: we were all enthralled. Do you remember my writing you that you were my favorite philosopher? I won't ever forget your reply.

True part, but how nice it would be to see you again. In fact that is just what is on my mind. Between the end of classes and exams we are taking a short trip to New York and Philadelphia. We expect to arrive Philadelphia at noon Tuesday, December 14th and spend the night at the Barclay. H.K. is attending a conference at the Wharton School. I am planning to come out to Bryn Mawr on the first train I can catch Wednesday morning, December 15th. We are flying home late that afternoon.

What joy and sadness I felt coming back last year. I still cannot reconcile myself to your wonderful old office being the mail room and those silly signs thumbtacked around the library. But many things were the same and I was so glad to see you.

Until, I hope, very soon.

Devotedly,
Kathleen
