OFFICE OF THE DEAN

Dear José,

I have a reference to Unamuno (a passage on "los límites de la racionalidad" and "la disolucion racional") that reads as follows :

M. de Unamuno, Del sentimiento tragico de la vida, V. "La disolucion racional." Ensayos, -- Aguilar, ed., Madrid, 1942, vol.II, p.750).

I have looked up your own dictionary but can't find what this is. Presumably an edition of some studies comprising the Del sentimiento. Can you jot down the correct reference in a more intelligible form or explain, please? I just want to quote a brief passage consisting of the words "los límites" down to "su propria validez."

Hope your summer has been pleasant. We had a splendid month in England and Scotland, in the course of which we drove nearly 3000 miles. Martin, who has now returned here, spent a day or two at Bryn Mawr en route and saw Jaime which encounter delighted Martin at any rate. He is at the moment set upon an engineering degree here.

Greetings to your family and to Milton.

En toute amitié.
