

[The text is a dense Latin manuscript, likely a legal or ecclesiastical document, written in a cursive hand. It is heavily obscured by ink bleed-through from the reverse side of the page. The text is arranged in approximately 30 horizontal lines across the page. Legible fragments include: "Sicut et consuetudo fidei supradicta...", "unde videtur et ex parte...", "et de hinc...", "unde videtur...", "et de illis...", "et de illis...", "et de illis...", "et de illis...". The document appears to be a continuation of a legal treatise or a set of records.]
