Dear Mr. Ferrater,

I have finished a book on Hegel. It's designed to lead the student by the hand through the Phenomenology of Mind. But I think there are also substantially better readings and more critical reading of the "Preface" and "Introduction" than have previously been offered. I would very much like to send you copies of some chapter for your opinion of the quality of the text, and ultimately I hope you will be willing to give me guidance in attempts to publish it. My problem is that I am not sure where you are. (Please notice that I am in Casper, rather than Laramie; I'm doing what they call extension teaching.)

I realize that you are possibly still in Spain (I was delighted to read that you were giving lectures in Madrid and being honored for your various achievements in both film and philosophy.) It might, then, be better to wait until you return before I send the manuscript.

At any rate, please let me know if, when, and to which address I should send my work.

Best wishes,

[Signatura]
