

FAIRFIELD UNIVERSITY
FAIRFIELD, CONNECTICUT

DEPARTMENT OF PHILOSOPHY

May 4, 1967

Dear Mr. Ferrater Mora,

If you've had no letter yourself from Troutman, he must be in academic hell now, too. Although, come to think of it, he can't be entirely so, because in early April he was absorbed in the reading of your Being and Death. He sent me a question about a particular claim of yours within it; it was a question I couldn't answer, so of course I told him to ask you directly.

But I am in academic hell. And though the need is hard upon me to work faster and faster, I seem to work slower and slower instead. Brain fatigue, I think I have. I shall need the summer for recuperation.

Do not bother to answer this note at all unless you are planning to leave Bryn Mawr before, say, the tenth of June. I am sure that you will be leaving very shortly after that, but I am proceeding on the assumption that you will yet be there then. It is along about that time that I shall come down to stay for a week or two, and of course I want to see you.

Sincerely,

Julia

12-5-67.