Dear Mr. Ferrater,

I've found a small, quiet apartment (its address is at the head of this letter) that provides me with several handsome views of the city. I live here on the 16th; by the 28th or so I expect to be entirely settled. I am anxious to get my mind on my classes –which begin on Sept. 20.

I've met & in fact, while apartment-hunting, been the guest on the home of one Peter Radcliff, the Acting Chairman. I've met & been taken some hours of apartment-hunting by one Nino Cocchiarella, the logician in the Department. I like these men and I should suppose that it will be pleasant to work with them. However, I definitely am on a one-year replacement appointment as is the young woman who is to replace Leblanc. Hence I shall start looking for something else soon.

Sincerely,
[Signatura]
