Dear Mr. Ferrater,

Once in a while these days I catch a thought about philosophy going through my head.

A good thing: classes at San Francisco State College start on the 20th, & I must meet four of them that very day. My schedule:

|   |               |       |       |
|---|---------------|-------|-------|
| M | 8-9           | 11-12 | 12-1, |
|   | & 7-9:45 p.m. |       |       |
| W | 8-9           | 11-12 | 12-1, |
| F | 8-9           | 11-12 | 12-1, |

I already have put myself into training to make an 8:00 class. I am accustoming myself to arise, & I think it natural to arise at 7:00. Soon I'll make it 6:30 & soon after that I'll make it 6:00. It is going to be hard, thought, I fear, for me even to believe in the real naturalness of arising then

Sincerely,
[Signatura]
