Dear Mr. Ferrater Mora,

I didn't suppose your address would come in handy this soon. But it is - because neither of us can add right. My figures that I gave you the other night were, I've discovered, an error. I was billing you for $90 too much. You made a mover error than I did though: you added "1" and "1" and got "3" somehow. Consequently you gave me $10 too much. In summary, the $ 39.85 which you gave me exceeded by $10.94 the 28.91 which you actually owed me. To reimburse you, I've gotten an International Money Order which will pay you the $10.94 in francs. The post office tells me that it should come into your hands about two weeks from now (they send it by regular mail from New York). When you have received it and cashed it, would you mind letting me know? I will save my receipt until then. Now, this should put me straight with your money-miss if not paper-miss.

I've hope you had a good way voyage. Here it is rainy so I am glooming.

Sincerely,
[Signatura]
