

Dear Mr Ferrater-Mora,

I have written on the applicability of Aristotle to one of the Percy Bysshe Shelley's poems, "Mont Blanc". I came across this poem while taking a course in 19th century English Poetry this last semester with Mrs. Eileen Johnston. I have written on the poem before in conjunction with another famous Romantic poem, Wordsworth's "Tintern Abbey". I particularly like "Mont Blanc" and was amazed to see the similarities between some of what Aristotle had to say about the Mind-Nature relationship and Shelley's poem. Of course Shelley's poem is not a philosophical treatise or any kind of discursive statement and so part of the paper is an analysis of the poem. Though you are no doubt familiar with the poem for ease of reference I have included a Xeroxed copy which is attached to the paper.

I thank you so very much for accepting the paper after the time it was dire. I do hope you have a nice Holiday Season.

Martha and I look forward to seeing you in Contemporary Philosophy next semester

Sincerely,
[Signatura]
