Dear Dr. Ferrater-Mora:

At its fall 1978 meeting the Board of Trustees and Editors of the Journal of Philosophy, decided to invite Professors James Higginbotham and Isaac Levi to serve as Consulting Editors of the Journal; Professors Higginbotham and Levi are both members of the Philosophy Department at Columbia whom the editors have in fact consulted on more than one occasion in recent years on matters in their special competence: philosophy of linguistics and probability theory, respectively. It would be appropriate, therefore, at this time for us to remove your name as Consulting Editor from the Journal masthead.

I understand that Professor Danto has already spoken with Professor Kline about this possibility and that it is not unsatisfactory to him.

May I express, on behalf of all of us at the Journal of Philosophy our appreciation for your much valued association with the Journal.

Very sincerely,

Albert G. Redpath
