Mr.
Dear ^AMora:

I apologize for answering so late your letter of August 5. I address my answer to your Spanish address with the hope that it will be forwarded to you, probably to my homeland, where you now must be.

I accept your suggestion and will write to the Editor of Inventario that they select for translation and publication into Italian your essay on the intellectual in our times. I will also send to the Editor a copy of El Hombre en La Encrucijada, and I am sure that they will be glad to publish one or more of its chapters. Later on, I may advise you concerning the Italian publishers who might be interested in this work.

In July, more or less at the same time when I wrote to you, I sent to your Bryn Mawr address a package with some of my publications. I prize your opinion so much that I would like to know whether you will be able to look through them some time. In the meantime, please check as to whether they arrived safely.

Next summer I will be in Europe too, Let's hope that we can meet somewhere on that occasion.

With my best thanks and regards,

Truly yours,

Renato Poggioli
