Dear Professor Ferrater Mora:

It was very good of you to answer my letter so quickly. I am more pleased than I can say that you will at least have time --or will make time-- enough to do the kind of a reading a publisher is interested in. I rather thought I was asking too much when I begged you to give me the kind of attention a dissertation writer gets.

Your letter was such good news that I phoned the president of W. W. Norton & Co., George P. Brockway, to tell him that (a) my re-write of the Ortega book was nearly complete, and (b) that, as he hoped, you would be willing to be Norton's reader for my manuscript. He said that was very good news, and so I will send him the manuscript as soon as it is typed clean and he will forward it to you.

So you see, you have not disappointed me at all; the compromise you suggest will do nicely. Thank you again. I only wish I could repay the favor.

Very best wishes,

Philip W. Silver
