Dear Professor Ferrater Mora:

Thank you very much for the time-table.

Pursuing your suggestion that I arrive at ^{on the 20th} Bryn Mawr early, I find that I can arrange to spend the previous night in New York and make a better start from there than is possible from here.

So I now plan to leave New York by the 8:30 a.m. train, which should connect at 30th Street with the train reaching Bryn Mawr at 10:35 a.m.

If this should not suit your convenience, please let me know. But if I do not hear from you, I shall assume that it is all right.

I shall have to be back in New York by one o'clock on the 21st, as Norton's have asked me to spend that afternoon discussing the MS with them.

The Beacon Press writes me that "Man at the Crossroads" has gone to the printer.

Yours sincerely,

Willard R. Trask
